First testing block of 2025 opens 1 January

Stay ahead in areas that affect financial reporting by pursuing the FSA Credential, the most advanced credential related to the ISSB Standards. In 2025, commit to deepening your understanding of the intersection of sustainability and financial performance. The average candidate spends 30–50 hours studying for each exam. Register now to take the FSA Credential Level I exam in January or February.

Who should earn the FSA Credential?

Corporate professionals: Whether in sustainability, operations, financial management or reporting, professionals face incoming regulations for sustainability disclosure and investor demand for better information. Prepare to navigate and succeed in this evolving environment.

Investors: As sustainable investing gains prominence, attain the insight needed for informed decision-making in fixed income, equity analysis, research and portfolio management.

External auditors and assurance providers: Prepare yourself to offer informed insights on the nexus of financial performance and sustainability.

Consultants: Enhance your client offerings by demonstrating expertise on the intersection between sustainability and financial performance.

Students: Differentiate yourself in the competitive job market by gaining a foundational understanding of how sustainability intersects with financial performance, opening doors to a variety of careers.

Register for Level I

Pursue the Credential on your own or ask your employer about a group registration for you and your colleagues. Group registrations offer discounted pricing, a collective learning environment and the option to participate in a group Q&A session with an IFRS Foundation staff member.

IFRS Sustainability Alliance Members are eligible for a 12% discount on registration, which can be found on the Member Portal.

Where can I learn more?

- Visit the IFRS Foundation website for answers to frequently asked questions, exam scheduling details, and testimonials from Credential Holders.
- View the slides and recording (passcode: IFRS2024!) from our recent webinar, "Introduction to the FSA Credential."
- Contact FSA_Credential@ifrs.org for more information about group registration.
